Mizzou Tiger

This is the most exciting project on which I have ever worked. This shows the progression of the University of Missouri Tiger. Starting with a wood and wire armature allowed me to sculpt a lightweight hollow model in my Maine studio. A rubber mold was made and transported to the foundry. Molten bronze was poured into ceramic molds. One hundred and ten bronze panels were welded together, seams were ground down, and the patina applied.

The dedicated foundry crew at Lands End Sculpture Center in Colorado loaded Mizzou Tiger, and we drove the 1,600-pound mascot to his new home for the dedication of Tiger Plaza. I had the pleasure of working with and meeting some wonderful people, and I was thrilled to learn that a national award (The Case Award) was granted to the University for Tiger Plaza.
